Fellowship Guidelines:

- The Fellowship is offered to Israeli citizens who have an MD, a PhD, or both degrees.
- All citizens of Israel, regardless of gender or religion, are eligible for the Fellowship.
- Candidates with an MD degree who have already completed their Internal Medicine training and gastroenterology training with clinical research experience are preferred. Candidates whose sole interest is clinical gastroenterology (i.e., those who do not have research interests) will also be considered.
- Candidates with a PhD degree need not have prior research experience in the field of digestive diseases, but must have an interest in pursuing digestive disease related research at the University of Chicago (i.e., diet and pharmacology)
- Applicants from the five medical schools in Israel, as well as the Weizmann Institute, may be nominated for the Fellowship.
- Proficiency in written and spoken English is required.
- Clinical candidates must pass the Step 2 Clinical Skills component of the US Medical Licensing Exam for temporary licensing to practice in the United States. See <http://www.ecfm.org/> for more information.
- Fellowship recipients are expected to return to Israel after completing their fellowship.
